GM Corporate Training

Applicants Sought for

New General Motors Automotive Service Education Program

Macomb Community College and General Motors Corporation are seeking applicants to begin training that will lead to a career as a GM Automotive Service Technician.

Students who complete the General Motors Automotive Service Education Program (ASEP) will be eligible for (2) associate's degrees. One in GM studies and in Automotive-Applied Science. This program will include specific applications to General Motors products and dealership operations.

Courses will be taught by Macomb Community College faculty who have received special training at the GM training center, using the latest GM vehicles, engines, transmissions, tools, and technical materials to provide students ,with state-of-the-art experience.

The program is designed to produce highly trained technicians who can service and maintain the sophisticated electronic and mechanical systems and other advanced components being included in all new General Motors products.

Students entering the GM-ASEP program at Macomb will be sponsored by General Motors Dealerships in the Greater Detroit area. As a cooperative educational experience, students will spend a portion of their course time in automotive technical classes and in the sponsoring dealerships gaining realworld work experience.

Macomb Community College has a network of over 75+ colleges nationwide offering the GM-ASEP program. Classes are scheduled to began every Fall at Macomb's Center for Automotive Education and Training facilities on South Campus in Warren. The program also includes academic courses with the required auto technology classes for completion of the associate degrees.
