Take the Make it in America Challenge

Macomb Grant Provides Free Training
So Your Company Can Make It In America!

Macomb Community College has joined with the Center for Automotive Research, Michigan Manufacturing Technology Center, Macomb/St. Clair Workforce Development Board and National Center for Manufacturing Sciences to form a partnership to help local companies Make it in America.

The partnership's Make it in America Challenge Grant is providing free occupational skills training to companies working with bio-based (composed of biomass products) materials or that are interested in working with new materials: i.e., a transition from traditional steel to aluminum, aluminum to carbon fiber, traditional alloys to super alloys, etc. The training includes:

- ◆ CNC Machining
- ◆ Product Design
- ◆ Multi-Skilled Technician—Mechatronics

Macomb Community College can work with your company to provide training opportunities for current employees using existing classes, or, for larger groups, we can customize the training to address the specific needs of your company. This customized, employer-driven training can be provided at our state-of-the-art facility or at yours, with your equipment.

New or current employees will train on industrial-quality equipment, gaining both technical knowledge and hands-on experience. This technology-specific training also provides a career pathway to four-year degrees in industrial- and engineering-related fields, increasing the local talent pool in areas that have often had to recruit qualified candidates from other countries, so local companies can MAKE IT IN AMERICA!

For more information about this free training opportunity, contact the project manager:
