Is Your Company in Compliance?

From knowing the toxic properties of Wite-Out to wearing protective glasses on the shop floor to containing a chemical spill, safety and emergency preparedness in the workplace should be a priority for employees and employers alike. Not only does it protect the wellbeing of an individual, it also protects the reputation and productivity of a company. And maintaining a safe workplace, whether it employs one or one thousand, is mandated by state and federal statutes.

Health and Safety Training at Macomb

Through its Health and Safety arm, Macomb Community College’s Public Service Institute offers emergency response and safety training to individuals, businesses and municipalities that is designed to secure compliance with state and national regulations, including those of OSHA, D.O.T., MIOSHA, NFPA, ISFSI and other regulatory agencies.

Macomb’s Health and Safety Training is also overseen by an advisory board made up of representatives from business, industry, emergency services and education, ensuring that the program remains responsive to changing training needs.
