About Us

With locations at both South and Center campuses, the Studios offer reading and writing support for students from all fields of study, whether seeking transfer to a four-year institution or entry into the professional workforce. Our consultants are skilled in the most modern methods of helping students read and write effectively for any course, focusing on consideration of instructors' assignments and expectations. The Studios offer effective support for readers and writers across campus, in part because we collaborate with faculty instructors, student services counselors, administrators and writing specialists around the state and nation to best support student learning.

We offer support to

- Writers who want to expand their knowledge of academic and professional writing
- Students encountering new writing contexts and genres
- Multilingual writers and readers
- Readers adapting to the expectations of college-level texts
- Workers facing shifting expectations for communications in their jobs
- New students and returning professionals developing digital literacy

Services Offered

- One-on-one consultations in the Studios at South & Center campuses
- Online consultations
- Workshops, including those on:
  - APA/MLA citation
  - Effective emails
  - Creating digital profiles
  - Interpreting first-draft feedback (What does the professor mean by "Needs development"?)
- Reading groups in support of assigned texts
- Online video tutorials available

What Writers Can Expect

Plan to bring your assignment sheet to each appointment along with any writing you have completed (from a list, a freewrite or a well-developed draft). We will help ensure that you are meeting the assignment's expectations. We will then aid your evaluation of your own writing in relation to content quality, effectiveness of organization, structure of paragraphs and effective use of standard and non-standard writing choices. Additionally, we will help you evaluate your level of grammar, its usage and mechanics.
